Considered by the Cabinet.

W.8 HNOTON, Jan. 7. — The cabinet meeting vesterday considered the Indian question, especially with reference to Gen. AN IMPORTANT QUESTION.

The Cultod States Sued for the Payment of Southern Bonds.

Baltimore, Jan. 7 .- Jacques Van-Raalte, a native of Rotterdam, Holland, but who resides and does business in Glasgow, where he is also consul for the Netherlands, instituted suit yesterday against Hon. James G. Blaine, as secreto July 28, 1866, the plaintiff bought at their full value $125,000 negotiable coupon bonds issued by the southern states. On that day Hon. William H. Seward, then secretary of state, issued a seward, then secretary of state, issued a proclamation which recited, among other things, that "neither the United States nor any state shall pay any debt of obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, but all such debts and obligations shall be illegal and void."

The plaintiff contends that the proclacould not be ascertained as the reds carried their dying and wounded away. About three hours after the courier's departure troops were seen coming at full gallop to the rescue. As the troops rode up the Indians scattered in all directions, and Troop F pursued them but abundoned the chase on account of darkness. The wagon train was escorted to camp in safety.

The seriousness of the situation here, however, is hourly increasing. Short Red Label and the leading health abing was not the united States and Great Britain and Holland. The case presents many curious points. The principal point that will be contended for, is that the United States has always held that the United States has always held that none of the southern states were ever out of the Union, that the secretary of state in his official capacity, had no authority to issue any proclamation tending to im-pair the obligations of any state, and that such obligations in the way of bonds are binding on, and are bound to be paid by the state issuing such bonds. The bonds in question are state bonds and Confederate state bonds jointly.

A committee of four from each house is to be appointed to prepare a bill after the commission makes a report provid-ing for a uniform salary system consist-ent with the duties of the county and

Mr. Belleville came to the relief of the cities whose jails and infirmaries are crowded with insane patients unable to gain admission to the asylums. Under the present system governing the institutions the state is divided into districts and the representation of admission is basel according to population, the result being that the counties containing cities in which insanity largely prevails are always exceeding their quota. Mr. Belleville's bill changes the method of representation by estimating it according to the insane population of the county. It also takes Columbians county out of the Cleveland district; changes Medina from Cleveland to Toledo; Morrow from Columbus to Athens:

Yorktown, Indiana, Being Reclaimed

YORKTOWN, Ind., Jan. 7.-This town is in the mudst of a great religious revival, and the people are thinking of little else. About six months ago Rev. John Pittenger came here and commenced to hold meetings at the Methodist Episcopal church, and it was not long until the members of the church had become aroused and many backsliders reclaimed as well as sinners convert-Sherman's proposition for an expansion ed, and much interest was manifested.

These meetings lasted four weeks with large attendance, then closed, but only for a few days, as the Salvation Army

Their meetings have now been held in the Methodist church for several days, and all Christian workers are laboring in union. Meetings are held night and in union. Meetings are held night and day, both men and women forsaking their work as much as possible to attend. No regular sermons are preached, but only reading of the Scripture, prayer and testimonies interpersed with the singing of gospel hymns as well as shouting and praising the Lord. Some of the hardest drinkers here have either been converted or signed the temperature. converted or signed the temperance pledge, and the saloons will have to close their doors if the meetings continue much longer.

None of us had beard it, that we could remember.

The young men said it was the funnies song that had ever been written, and that if we liked they would get Herr Slomens Boschen, whom they knew very well, to sing it. They said it was so funny that when Herr Slossenn Boschen had sung it once before the German emperor he (the German emperor: had to be carried off to

They said nobody could sing it like Herr Slossenn Boschen, he was so intensely so-rious all through it that you might fancy he was reciting a tragedy, and that, of course, made it all the funnier. They said he never once suggested by his tone or manner that he was singing anything funny, that would spoil it. It was his air of seriousness, almost of pathos, that made it so irresistibly amusing.

We said we yearned to hear it, that we wanted a good laugh, and they went down stairs and fetched Herr Slossenn Boschen. He appeared to be quite pleased to sing it, for he came up at once and sat down to the piano without another word. "Oh, it will amuse you. You will laugh." whispered the two young men, as they passed through the room and took up an

I don't understand German myself. I tearned it at school, but forgot every word of it two years after I had left, and have feit much better ever since. Still I did feit much better ever since. Still I did not want the people there to guess my ignorance, so I hit upon what I thought to be a rather good idea. I kept my eye on the two young students and followed them. When they tittered, I tittered; when they roared, I roared, and I also threw in a lit-

the snigger all by myself now and then, as if I had seen a bit of humor that had escaped the others. I considered this particularly artful on my part. I noticed, as the song progressed, that a good many other people seemed to have their eye fixed on the two young men as well as myself. These other people also tittered when the young men tittered, and roared when the young men roafed; and as the two young men tittered and roared and exploded with laughter pretty contin-

And yet that German professor did not seem happy. At first, when we began to laugh, the expression of his face was one of intense surprise, as if laughter were the very last thing he had expected to be greeted with. We thought this very funny: we said his earnest manner was half the humor. The slightest hint on his part that he knew how funny he was would have completely ruined it all. As we continued to laugh his surprise gave way to an air of annoyance and indignation, and e scowled hercely round upon us all (except upon the two young men, who, being behind him, he could not see). That sent ns into convulsions. We told each other it would be the death of us this thing. The words alone, we said, were enough to send us into fits, but added to his mock

Extremely valuable diamonds are almost perfectly safe property. A gentheman who possessed one valued at $50,000 passed it freely from hand to hand in a large commercial establishment, and even allowed a man whom he knew nothing about to take it out of the room

"I should think you would be afraid that it would be stolen," some one mid.

The owner of the diamond smiled. "Its value is its protection," he said. "A thief, in order to realize anything upon that diamond, would have to take t to a large dealer, and the diamond is perfectly well known to every such dealer in America or Europe. It would be recognized and held at once."

"But could not the thief have it cut up into small diamonds, and sold in that way?"

"To be cut, it would have to go either to Amsterdam or to one of two or three men in America. In either case it would be found registered, with my name as its owner. It would be of no more real value to the thief than a lump of coal."-Youth's Companion.
